Introduction

Dream Wedding IN Thailand

Why choose Thailand as the destination for your wedding? The answer lies in the abundance and diversity of any given factor required to create the perfect wedding. From romantic settings to luxurious facilities and knowledgeable wedding organisers and catering teams, everything is readily within reach. The fact that every couple has their own lifestyle preference has created more challenge for Thai wedding organisers to excel even further. It would hardly be an overstatement to say that whatever brides and grooms ask for, they will get.

Today, couples have more choices as to where and how to celebrate their special day, apart from the usual hotel ballrooms. They could have their reception on yachts, in beautiful gardens, or on the beach.

Or if theirs is a huge gathering with thousands on the guest list, there are venues which cater to extra large gatherings. And that's not all. For the more adventurous, they could explore their wild side and have their wedding on hot-air balloons, under water, riding on elephants, and so much more. As for making things legal, arrangement to have priests and ordained ministers perform the sacred ceremony, or having legal documents prepared can be arranged by your organiser.

Another factor that cannot be dismissed is the extra value for money you will get. Not many other places in the world can match what is offered here when comparing dollar for dollar. Whether you have a small or unlimited budget, it is still possible to have the wedding of your dreams.

In addition, the beautiful topography around the country is so vast that couples are not limited to one concentrated area. Excellent hotel accommodation is in great abundance and very much affordable year-round. Whether you enjoy spending time on the beaches and islands, in the mountains and forests, by the river, or in the city, Thailand will not disappoint you.

As for things to do and attractions to see, there is not enough time to go through them all. Since the country is already one of the world's leading holiday destinations, newlyweds could enjoy their honeymoon without more traveling while their guests would surely sneak in a vacation of their own. With postcard-perfect beaches and islands, magnificent temples and ancient ruins, gastronomic intercontinental dining selections, great shopping galore, exciting nightlife and entertainment, ultra luxurious hotels and spas, and world-class facilities like 36-hole golf courses and marinas, there isn't much one could not find in this country.

Other supporting factors that make Thailand a frontrunner to have weddings are numerous, one being the warm, sunny weather that is very uplifting. A tropical country like this gets to enjoy weather averaging around 30 degrees Celsius year-round, apart from the cooler rainy season and the short summer that gets very hot at times. As for services and convenience, Thais are truly service-minded people who often go out of their way to please. Brides and grooms can be sure that choosing Thailand as their wedding destination will be one of the best choices they have ever made.

Cultural Thai Weddings

Thailand is a country with a rich and diverse culture. Each region has its own tradition which has been passed on from their ancestors for centuries. Whether couples prefer the standard Thai-style wedding of the Central Region, the North's Lanna tradition, Northeast's Isan tradition, or rich South's tradition, every style involves beautiful procedures and its own way of bringing good vibrations into the newlywed's lives. Many modern day couples now want to get in touch with the origins of their roots and enrich their lives with a meaningful traditional wedding experience. Cultural Thai weddings are not limited to only Thais, but are suitable for anyone who wishes to enjoy the experience. Although the modern day wedding ceremony for most Thais has been altered by Western influences, there are many traditions that define Thai culture and they have still been practiced until today.

With the major population being Buddhists, Thais' daily lives are closely related with their religion and they always 'Tham Bun Liang Phra' for all special occasions. This process involves offering the monks with a full meal and other goods; such as, candles, incense, flowers, and donation money as a way of making merit. The meal is usually consumed at eleven and completed before noon, as this is called 'Chan-Pane'. After the feast, the monks will chant a full session of prayers in order to bring good luck for the couple. The bride and groom can make merit further by freeing birds, turtles, and fishes into the wild as a way to make an auspicious start of a new life together. Alternatively, they could 'Tham Bun Tak Bat' which involves the bride and groom getting up very early in the morning to offer alms to the monks who pass by during their round of 'Binthabat'. The monks will then chant their prayers and give their blessing to the couple who will bow their heads and put their hands together in a 'Wai' position (to show their respect).

'Rot Nam Sang' is a ceremony where the bride and groom kneel side by side on a stand and extend their hands out in a 'Wai' position. There will be a long piece of white ceremonial string with one end encircling the groom's head while the other is on the bride's head. The most senior person of the family would be the first in line to pour water from a conch shell onto the couple's hands as he gives his blessings. Other members of the family and respected family friends would also follow the gesture with their own blessings.

The 'Hae Khan Mak' procession is a jovial parade where the groom and his entourage make their way to the bride's house on foot to ask for her hand in marriage. They would bring with them food, cash, gold, gifts, and other goods as a dowry to the bride's family.

Along the way, they would sing, dance, and make music on a drum. Leading the parade is a respectable figure called 'Thao Kae' who is there to officially ask permission for the girl to marry the groom. When the bride's parents accept the 'Khan Mak', it signifies that they give permission for their daughter to marry the groom. Also, before the groom can reach the bride, he must make his way pass the 'gates' consisting of chains held on either side by the bride's friends and family. In order to pass through, he must give out envelopes containing money to the gatekeepers. Once they are content, he can then pass through.

Beautiful Thai-style weddings of different regions such as the North, the Lanna style, or Isan style of the Northeast also involve similar processes, but they each have other charming traditions that are distinctly practiced in their region. All processes of the Northern style are done slowly and gracefully while the Isan style is more lively and colourful.

Indian Weddings

Many Indian couples have chosen Thailand as their wedding destination for all the right reasons. Indian weddings are very festive, colourful events that continue for several days with a guest list often involving hundreds of people. Apart from being a celebration for the union of two people, it is also a major social gathering for friends and family.

A truly amazing event to watch, the bride traditionally wears pink or red saris while adorning sparkling jewellery from head to toe. She will be given a special necklace and the groom will put a little 'sindoor' (red powder) in the parting of her hair as a symbol of her married status. Her hands and feet would be painted with henna in beautiful patterns. An Indian groom often wears a turban with a veil of flowers streaming down in front of this face to ward off evil spirits.

Traditionally, there will be a spread of sweets, eggs, and money to symbolise the sweet life, fertility, and prosperity. After the wedding vows have been exchanged, the groom's father would sprinkle flower petals on the newlyweds and hold a coconut over them and circle it around their heads three times.

Western-style Weddings

Whether you dream of getting married in a church, in a floral garden, or by the sea, there will be a priest or an ordained minister to perform the ceremony. Catholics deciding to tie the knot in a Buddhist country like Thailand can still have the same ceremony the way it would be performed in their own country. The bride would walk down the aisle in her flowing white dress with a veil covering her face. Usually, she is escorted by her father. The organ would play those familiar tunes and when she reaches the groom, the minister would ask them to repeat their vows after him.

They both would make a promise to love and honour each other in sickness and in health, for richer or poorer until their dying day. After they say the words 'I do' and exchange rings, the minister would pronounce them husband and wife and allow the groom to kiss his new bride.

Chinese Weddings

With close ties and relations forming for centuries, Chinese and Thai people have always shared mutual customs and deep-rooted understanding. And with the large number of Chinese migrating to Thailand over the years, a special bond has inevitably formed, thus infusing customs into one another. For these reasons and more, many Chinese couples feel contented to have their wedding ceremonies in Thailand as there is a minimal culture gap, and on the plus side they could enjoy a warm, tropical atmosphere that is refreshingly different than the cold, bleak environment back home.

The Chinese wedding ceremony itself is not too complex compared to the traditional rituals of betrothal, preparations, the bride's elaborate red wedding dress with a veil covering her face, installing of the bridal bed, etc. But even so, some customs have been simplified to suit the modern age like instead of brides and grooms retiring to their bridal bed, they can just spend their first night together as a married couple at the hotel after the banquet. As for the ceremony itself, the bride and groom would be guided to the altar to pay homage to Heaven and Earth, family ancestors and the Kitchen God. They would then offer tea to the groom's parents and bow to each other.

One important part of the Chinese wedding ceremony still practiced today is Tea Serving. This involves the bride and groom kneeling before the parents and elders to offer tea as a gesture of gratitude and respect. The order begins with the groom's parents then proceeds with the eldest members of the groom's family; such as, grandparents, followed by the bride's grandparents, uncles, aunts, and so on.

Chinese weddings place significance on food served at the banquet, as it is believed to bring good fortune to the couple's lives; such as, prosperity, fertility, and happiness. In addition, it also symbolises the groom's wealth and status. A banquet meal often consists of 8 (the word 'eight' in Chinese sounds similar to 'good luck') to 10 courses, and frequently consist of assorted appetisers; such as, jelly-fish, chicken feet, nuts, and other delicacies; shark's fin soup or abalone (wealth), roasted suckling pig (virginity), lobster (red signifies happiness), whole fried chicken (good life), fish (abundance), vegetables with sea cucumber (good heart), noodles (longevity), and others. Mainly, lobster and chicken served during the feast represents Yin and Yang, or a healthy balance in the new partnership. For dessert, sweet red bean soup denotes a sweet life while the buns with lotus paste stuffing indicate fertility.

Festival Weddings

Trang Underwater Wedding

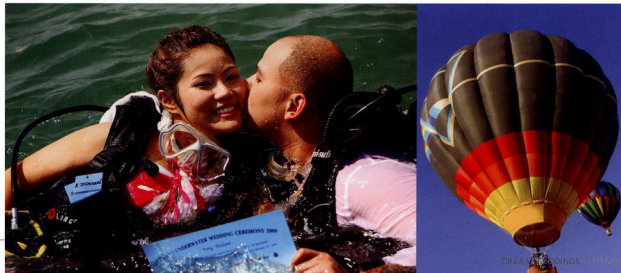

The wedding trend that had started only recently in Thailand is 'The Festival Wedding'. Although this type of wedding began only a few years ago, they have become so popular that hundreds of couples have been known to participate in the event. One of the first and most popular of these is the 'Underwater Wedding' held annually in Trang province. It gives a chance for Thais and foreigners alike to join in the fun while sharing with other couples the same joy and happiness in the celebration of their love. This event is organised by the Tourism Authority of Thailand (TAT) in conjunction with other private sectors to promote tourism for Thailand so participants can be certain of the standard and satisfaction. Couples will enjoy a traditional Thai wedding ceremony and a wedding certificate formally signed underwater.

The popularity of the Trang Underwater Wedding Ceremony is unquestionable as the one held during 13-15 February, 2009 marks the 13th consecutive year this tradition has been carried on. Moreover, it is officially in the Guinness World Records of 2000 as being 'The Largest Underwater Wedding Ceremony' ever held.

Hot Air Balloon Wedding

In Chiang Mai province, fourteen couples together with official marriage registrars went up in fourteen hot-air balloons and had their 'wedding in the sky'. The event is aimed at promoting Thailand as a theme wedding destination and is likely to catch on very quickly.

Wedding ON THE Beach

There is something inexplicably liberating and magical about beaches that can bring out heart-felt inspiration to artists of every genre, whether they are poets, painters, or song writers. Perhaps it's the overwhelming serenity of unbound nature or the softness of the sand surrounded by the vast ocean and sky that extends as far as the imagination takes us. Whatever it is, the beach atmosphere is undeniably romantic, so much so that many couples choose this very scene to play out one of the most significant events of their lives, their wedding ceremony.

Thailand, being a tropical country blessed with countless immaculate beaches and islands, is perfect for destination weddings on the beach.

With the Gulf of Thailand on the East and the Andaman Sea on the West, the long, narrow stretch of land from the Central Region all the way to the South is virtually surrounded by beaches and islands in all shapes, sizes, and atmospheres. Millions of inbound tourists who visit Thailand each year come to enjoy the tropical sea, sand, and sun the way they won't be able to find anywhere else. Many couples who previously came for their honeymoon would return years later with their children for a family vacation while others come back to celebrate their 10th or 20th wedding anniversary. Moreover, having made the list of numerous world-class travellers' choice for top holiday destinations is evidently an unbiased seal of satisfaction.

The benefits of having your dream beach wedding in Thailand are numerous. The vast choices of hotel operators who offer wedding facilities and services allow couples to choose one which will suit their lifestyles and budget. The vast coastline extending from the East to the South then back up the West end, covers thousands of kilometres of gorgeous sandy strips in different provinces, so guests could choose the best locale for their wedding. But that's not all; the dreamy islands that lie near and far off the coast are filled with incredible beauty beyond imagination.

Aside from the obvious beauty of the natural topography, Thailand is second to none when it comes to luxurious facilities and impeccable services. Known around the world as the land of smiles, foreign visitors have mentioned time after time of the Thai hospitality filled with warmth, friendliness, and an eagerness to please. Of course, an innovative approach to organising weddings is always updated in order to render the most touching memories for every couple. Whether the bride and groom wishes for a full-on beach wedding with white canopies, 4-piece orchestra and candle-lit dinner reception for two hundred guests or a small, intimate wedding with family members and close friends, it can all be arranged.

The details couples need to discuss with their wedding organisers include the menus, the flower arrangements, number of guests, the cake, tuxedo for the groom and gown for the bride, photographer, videographer, accommodation for guests in attendance, honeymoon package, or any other requests you may have. Very often, hotels do provide special wedding packages that can save the couple a lot of money while enjoying many additional benefits and discounts.

Wedding ON THE Cruise

For centuries, the Chao Phraya River has long been considered one of the most romantic rivers in the world. Dotted with ancient temples and marvellous architecture along its banks, complete with the picture-perfect panorama of the sunrise and sunset during dawn and dusk, this river would be a perfect choice for any couple wishing to celebrate a memorable wedding that would last their entire lifetime.

Stretching from Bangkok and winding its way up past the ancient city of Ayutthaya and beyond, the future bride and groom may choose to have their wedding on any location along the banks. More impressive, however, they may choose to have their nuptials on a cruise and wow their friends and family with all the spectacular views and panoramic sites that this river has to offer.

With over 370 kilometres in length, a plethora of routes can be chosen for a wedding cruise along the Chao Phraya. For example, the couple may choose to embark their journey in the late afternoon in central Bangkok and set to sail with a refreshing cocktail passing the Temple of Dawn (Wat Arun), Wat Pho, the Grand Palace and the Temple of the Emerald Buddha, and Rama VIII Bridge before proceeding further to the calm and quiet area of Nonthaburi just in time for sunset. Even more picturesque still, they may choose to sail along further to Ayutthaya passing the palace of Bang Pa-in which was once a summer residence of King Rama V the great and the magnificent ancient pagodas and temples of Wat Yai Mongkhon and Wat Chai Wattanaram before u-turning to Bangkok at night when guests aboard may unleash their much-needed dancing and jubilation.

Another interesting route may be to sail to the opposite direction towards the province of Samut Prakan in the late afternoon before reaching the picturesque location right near the mouth of the river for the tying of the knot during the sunset. Afterwards, the fun continues as guests enjoy cocktails of innovative finger foods and canapés or gastronomic dinners while being serenaded by a live band or string quartet.

Alternatively, if the soon-to-be newlywed prefer to have a fun and local flare to their wedding, they may opt for a smaller boat and sail into a few of the smaller tributaries of the Chao Phraya where they can witness the local people going about the daily chores, and they can celebrate their wedding by having a ceremony in one of the local temples or churches.

Moreover, if they prefer so, they may also arrange a wedding cruise in the ocean either in the Gulf of Thailand when the weather is suitable during the summer months or in the Andaman Sea during the winter months. Thailand's world famous beaches would make a suitable starting point or a perfect destination for any wedding cruise.

With many respectable companies offering state-of-the-art cruises ranging from imported yachts to completely refurbished rice barges and equipped with impeccable catering services, the prospective couple could rest assured that all their wedding needs will be properly and effectively taken care of and most importantly, the safety measures on every vessel for hire would meet the international standard. Yachts and cruises for private weddings come in various sizes to suit every couple's requirements. There are smaller boats for intimate receptions attended by close friends and immediate family members only to those which cater up to hundreds of guests.

Individual Wedding AND Function Venues

Being one of the most exotic cities in the world, Bangkok, or commonly referred to by the locals as the 'City of Angels', has recently become a very attractive destination for brides and grooms around the world to celebrate their matrimony in the most memorable and exciting way. There are numerous ways to get married in this fun and upbeat city. Starting first with the formalities; if the couples would like to begin by holding religious wedding ceremonies, Bangkok is home to thousands of beautiful temples, hundreds of amazing mosques, and a few awe-inspiring cathedrals and churches.

For a Thai/Buddhist ceremony, imagine the bride being paraded to the temple along with her family members headed by her bridesmaids throwing petals of roses and jasmine amidst the pounding of drums and blowing of conch horns. The groom and his party await the bride at the chapel where the gigantic golden statue of the Buddha looking down smilingly as a witness to the solemn occasion. The couples are then blessed by monks who chant for their union, well being, protection, and prosperity, after which they are blessed by the pouring of blessed water on their hands by everyone present in the ceremony.

For the afternoon celebration, the newlyweds may hold the wedding reception for their family members and friends at one of the magnificent pavilions of teak wood available for rent; such as, the Jim Thompson House, the Siam House Village or Ruan Nine Thai. At one of these

Thai houses, guests can expect to enjoy the wedding reception in a relaxing atmosphere of traditional Thai architecture, the exotic touch of Thai cuisine and the impeccable service of Thai hospitality.

On the other hand, if the couple would like to get married in a church, there are a handful of splendid churches; such as, the Assumption Cathedral, the Holy Rosary Church, and the Holy Redeemer Church. In fact, a few were built by foreign settlers and missionaries and are as old as the city itself. For example, the Assumption Cathedral located on the bank of the Chao Phraya River and next to the famous Mandarin Oriental Hotel, was built by French missionaries in the 19th century, and is the biggest and undoubtedly the most beautiful in the kingdom.

The Cathedral features a gigantic dome built in the French style; the interior is decorated with marble in different colours and complimented with gold leaves, and the altar is raised high above the ground and is watched over by the statue of the Blessed Virgin ascending to heaven. A wedding ceremony in this cathedral would be a picture-perfect event that would give everybody goose bumps as soon as the bride walks down the aisle to meet her groom.

Moreover, Bangkok is really a very economical and convenient place to get married, as a wide range of wedding venues and services have sprung up. In fact, most wedding venues available for rent offer attractive packages that include everything from flower decorations and ceremony arrangement to the cocktail reception and post-ceremony entertainments. Recently, however, a new type of wedding-related service has emerged in the medical industry. For example, the TRIA Wellness Centre at the Piyavate Hospital offers a Bridal Package that exclusively incorporates massage, facial, makeup, manicure, pedicure, and hairstyling services for the bride on her most special day.

Wedding IN THE Garden

For conservative couples, a wedding in a beautiful lush garden has always been a favourite alternative, as it takes full advantage of the natural beauty of the venue itself. With a soft tropical breeze flowing through fully-grown trees, playing host to a family of songbirds, a garden wedding will be a truly memorable occasion for not only the bride and groom but also for their guests. Couples do not have to think much about decorating the venue because of the natural beauty of the garden. So, all that is needed is to simply enhance the beauty of the garden by using decorative elements like centrepieces, chair covers, flower pots, and floral displays.

The advantage that a garden wedding has over a hotel ballroom wedding is the lack of restrictions from the squared confines of the typical function room. People tend to be in a more relaxed state of mind when surrounded by nature and are keen to enjoy themselves a lot more leading to long-lasting memories of joy and happiness. Photographs of the event itself will turn out beautifully due to the outdoor setting and the natural light softly diffused through the garden's foliage.

Another advantage of having a garden wedding is the privacy the wedding couple gets compared to a hotel venue. Most garden venues can cater to only one event at a time while a hotel usually has multiple function rooms filled up especially on auspicious dates. The only factor that should be taken into consideration is that Thailand has a tropical climate, so the preferred months for an outdoor wedding are between November to February when the weather is not so warm. However, due to the unpredictability of the weather conditions that may occur, it is advisable to consult your wedding specialist or organiser for advice.

Food and Beverage

One of the most important aspects of a garden wedding, or any kind of wedding for that matter, is the food and drinks that are served to the guests. For garden weddings, due to the casual nature of the event, couples will normally choose a cocktail-style reception with service staff walking among the guests carrying trays laden with light finger food and canapés.

Another favourite is the light standing buffet style of cuisine where a line of chafing dishes are set up, usually towards the side of the garden, and heavier dishes provide a more filling fare. These two styles do away with the formalities of having big round tables and fixed seating arrangements required in hotel weddings, and so the sensitive issue of VIP seating is done away with. Nevertheless, if a set menu-style dinner is preferred, the on-site wedding specialist can also arrange it. The garden venues in Thailand are fully equipped and experienced to handle either small, intimate weddings, or bigger gatherings of a couple of hundred guests.

Garden Ambiance and Décor

The venues available in Thailand are purposely-built locations decorated to showcase the uniqueness of Thai architecture, flora, and of course the graceful culture. Some venues are century-old family homes belonging to royalty and aristocrats with large central courtyards surrounded by antique traditional wooden houses built from golden teak wood. Nonetheless, most garden venues do provide indoor and alfresco seating/function areas where guests could enjoy fresh air amidst tropical garden foliage or escape the heat for air-conditioned comfort. This fact plus the possibility of traditional Thai entertainment all add up to a truly unforgettable wedding experience.

Wedding ON THE Hotels & Resorts

Still the most popular choice for conventional couples to hold their wedding reception, hotel ballrooms have proven to be the most practical way to go. Valid reasons have to do with convenience and a wide choice of facilities and services available to the couple and their guests. Luxury hotels across Thailand are always ready with teams of wedding organisers and experts who can cater to the bride's and groom's every whim as they have accumulated years of experience in the business.

Convenience aside, luxury hotels do have many advantages over other types of wedding venues. They are purposely built to carry out special functions; such as, weddings, not to mention the convenience of comfortable accommodation readily available for the couple and their guests. Ballrooms and function halls in each hotel may vary in size, but most will be able to take on anywhere from fifty to several hundred, while some are large enough to cater to a list of a thousand guests. The varying factor also has to do with the seating arrangements, whether the reception is a cocktail, a buffet, a Chinese style ten-course meal, an Indian feast, or a totally different style altogether.

High ceilings, lavish crystal chandeliers, the comfort of air-conditioning all around, immaculate landscaped grounds, captivating views of the surrounding, and imposing décor are all part of the appeal. Other contributing factors which cannot be dismissed are the expected central location for easy access, great parking facilities, and efficient service of high-end hotels.

Food and Beverage

For any wedding banquet, it is undeniable that food and beverage play a vital role in making the event a success. The bride and groom should therefore put in extra attention in selecting the right menu for their guests. There are delightful fusion finger foods and canapés for cocktail parties and gourmet dishes for formal banquets. You may find that different hotels are famous for certain specialties while not-so-much at others, so it might be an idea to have a taste before deciding. But basically, the major hotels in Thailand do employ top chefs who are masters at creating authentic Western, Mediterranean, Indian, Chinese, Japanese, fusion, Thai cuisine, and perhaps a few other exotic fares upon request. And to complement your list of gastronomic food choices, perhaps some wine or champagne will be most ideal.

Decorations and Other Details

One other advantage of having your wedding in a hotel ballroom is the freedom and privacy of an enclosed space to create any atmosphere you want. There are things to consider like lighting or music, whether you prefer a 4-piece orchestra, live band, traditional/ethnic band or other types. There's also the flower arrangements to go with your theme: red roses for enduring passion, peonies for romance and prosperity, orchids for pure affection, or be innovative and go with a forest theme similar to the one created at Prince William and Princess Catherine's inside Westminster Abbey in 2011. The 'icing on the cake' for a wedding is really the cake itself. Couples could ask to see a list offered by the hotel, and decide on its size, colour, number of layers, decorations, and so on.

Flaunting the magnificent Lanna Thai architecture in a picturesque, romantic setting, The Rim is centrally located around one of Chiang Mai's five old city gates called 'Suan Dok'. The original square-shaped city layout was believed to have been constructed during the reign of King Meng-rai, way before the Royal House of Chakri even started. This Northern province is rich in Lanna history and culture, as evident in many of the temples and ruins scattered throughout the city. To capture this very essence, the Lanna architecture is replicated into our resort's design where guests could immediately feel its exotic presence from the entrance. The grand ambience extends into the imposing lobby, restaurants, swimming pool area, and even the serene landscaped gardens.

The resort's 36 luxurious guest-rooms with modern interiors are underlain with a slight hint of Oriental charm. They are separated into 3 sections: Chaba, Dahla and Monta which are all named after Thai flowers. Starting with the smallest rooms, the Monta Superior are 40.5 sq.m. in size followed by Dahla Superior which offers 43.2 sq.m. For slightly more space, the Chaba Deluxe Rooms with 50.2 sq.m. or Dahla Deluxe Rooms with 52 sq.m. might be more appropriate. But on special occasions where brides and grooms deserve full-on indulgence, the Dahla Junior Suite is the only way to go.
